

Whether it's negotiations assistance, grievance handling, education, training and mentoring or something else, UAW local unions have access to a number of services the International Union provides to help serve members. But did you know you can get a free website for your local? All you have to do is pay for the domain!

SolidWeb 2.0 is a powerful, free website-building tool that was developed as a part of an AFL-CIO program aimed at helping affiliated local unions build quality websites.

Powerful software: SolidWeb was developed in Drupal, an open source platform used all across the web.

Customizable site: Choose among a plethora of content layout options and make the site unique to your local and bring the best experience to members.

Responsive: No matter the device, your local's website will fit the screen beautifully.

Content Syndication: Always have fresh content and share it easily.

Support: Free training, list services and more.

No Cost: SolidWeb is a FREE program for all local unions— the full cost of development and hosting is covered by the International Union, UAW. All you pay for is the domain.

The Action Network is a progressive online organizing platform. Any local union can become an organizer by signing up with the form below.

With that account, organizers can publish actions to the public, such as a petition to an elected official, an event RSVP form for a meeting the organizer is holding, a survey form to collect answers from a community, a fundraising form to collect money for an upcoming campaign, or a letter campaign to have activists email elected officials. Use it to send out emails to your members about contract or bargaining updates.

As other activists take action and fill out the forms an organizer has published, those activists are opted into the organizer's email list. Using our built-in mass mailing tool, organizers can contact that list of activists whenever they want, and download the data on their list too!

In short, along with SolidWeb, the Action Network includes everything you need to organize online, assisting in online communication for your local union.
